THE ARTICLE

From <http://www.BreakingNewsEnglish.com/1305/130520-tourists.html>

China's Vice-Premier Wang Yang has asked Chinese tourists to behave better when they go overseas. Mr Wang wants to make sure that all Chinese people give a good image of China when they visit other countries. He said the behaviour of some tourists was harming China's image abroad. He made a list of the things he does not want people to do. These include talking loudly in public places, jaywalking and spitting. Mr Wang said newspapers in other countries often report the bad manners of some Chinese and that this damaged the image of all Chinese people. He asked all public officials and tourist agencies to help, saying: "Building a good image of Chinese tourists is the duty of governments at all levels."

More and more Chinese people are travelling each year. The "South China Morning Post" newspaper wrote: "As people get richer, foreign holidays are ever more popular...but reports have emerged of complaints about [manners]." A new Chinese law will let travel agencies ban misbehaving tourists from using their services again. However, many Chinese tourists have complained of being treated badly by hotels and restaurants. There are also many stories of gangs attacking and robbing rich Chinese. One tourist said people from all countries have to respect local customs. He added that non-Chinese tourists must also behave better in China, and that all countries have citizens who behave badly abroad.

ROLE PLAY

From <http://www.BreakingNewsEnglish.com/1305/130520-tourists.html>

Role A – Image important

You think it's important to behave very well in other countries. Tell the others three reasons why. You think people should read about the local customs of a country before they visit it. You should always be very polite abroad so everyone has a good image of your country.

Role B – Image unimportant

You don't think it's important to try and behave well when you travel. Tell the others three reasons why. It's more important for people in the country you are visiting to accept your manners – you are helping the economy of that country. The whole world cannot be polite all the time.

Role C – Government

You think tourists should always act with respect in other countries. Tell the others three reasons why. You think there should be a test as part of the visa process – people must learn about what to do and not to do in other countries. The world will be a friendlier place if that happens.

Role D – Hotel owner

You are shocked at the behaviour of overseas tourists in your hotel. Tell the others three reasons why. You think your government should pass a law that says tourists must leave if they have bad manners. It is not your job to understand the manners of tourists.

China's Vice-Premier Wang Yang has asked Chinese tourists to behave better when they go overseas. Mr Wang wants to make sure that all Chinese people give a good image of China when they visit other countries. He said the behaviour of some tourists was harming China's image abroad. He made a list of the things he does not want people to do. These include talking loudly in public places, jaywalking and spitting. Mr Wang said newspapers in other countries often report the bad manners of some Chinese and that this damaged the image of all Chinese people. He asked all public officials and tourist agencies to help, saying: "Building a good image of Chinese tourists is the duty of governments at all levels." More and more Chinese people are travelling each year. The "South China Morning Post" newspaper wrote: "As people get richer, foreign holidays are ever more popular... but reports have emerged of complaints about [manners]." A new Chinese law will let travel agencies ban misbehaving tourists from using their services again. However, many Chinese tourists have complained of being treated badly by hotels and restaurants. There are also many stories of gangs attacking and robbing rich Chinese. One tourist said people from all countries have to respect local customs. He added that non-Chinese tourists must also behave better in China, and that all countries have citizens who behave badly abroad.
