

Breaking News English.com

Teenager sells her old bath water in bottles – 8th July, 2019

Level 0

A woman is selling her bath water on Instagram. It is very popular. She sold all 500 bottles of it. She has over four million followers. A video on her page had bottles of the water for $30. She said: "This water is not for drinking and should only be used for [emotional] purposes." She winks and water drips from her mouth into a bottle.

The 19-year-old Londoner wears skimpy clothes on Instagram and sits in a bath. She also sells selfies. Some selfies cost $2,500. She wants more "weird ideas" to make money. Not everyone likes the bath water idea. Many people called it "gross". One person said the world is going crazy. Other people liked her business skills.

Level 1

A woman is selling her bath water. It is so popular it has sold out. The woman is on Instagram. She has over four million followers. She posted a video to her page advertising bottles of her old bath water for $30. In the video, she said: "This water is not for drinking and should only be used for sentimental purposes." She winks and lets water from her mouth drip into a bottle. Her fans really wanted the water. She sold all 500 bottles of it in just two days.

The 19-year-old Londoner is popular on social media. She wears skimpy clothes and sits in a bath. Old bath water is her latest moneymaking idea. She also sells selfies. Some selfies cost up to $2,500. She wants to "come up with weird ideas" to make money. The bath water is not popular with everyone. Many people called it "gross". One person said: "Every day, we stray further and further away from God." Other people said she had good business skills.

Level 2

An English woman is selling her bath water. The water is so popular it has sold out. The woman is an Instagram cosplay model with over four million followers across social media. She posted a video to her page advertising small jars of her old bath water for $30. In the video, she said: "It's time to get your gamer girl bath water. This water is not for drinking and should only be used for sentimental purposes." She winks at the camera and lets water from her mouth drip into a bottle. Her fans eagerly placed an order for the water. Her stock of 500 jars of the water sold out in two days.

The 19-year-old Londoner has become popular on social media by wearing skimpy clothes and sitting in a bath. Selling her old bath water is her latest moneymaking idea. Another way she makes money is by selling selfies. Followers can pay up to $2,500 for some of her selfies. She is constantly trying to "come up with weird ideas" to make money. Her bath water idea is not popular with everyone on social media. Many people called it "gross". An Instagram user commented: "Every day, we stray further and further away from God." Other people said she had good business skills.

Level 3

A woman in England is selling her bath water. It is so popular that the water has sold out. The woman is Instagram cosplay model Belle Delphine. She has over four million followers across the social media site. She posted a video to her Instagram page advertising small jars of her old bath water for $30. In the video, she said: "Gamer boys - It's time to get your gamer girl bath water." She added: "This water is not for drinking and should only be used for sentimental purposes." She then winks at the camera and lets water from her mouth drip into a small bottle. Thousands of her fans eagerly placed an order for the water. Her entire stock of 500 jars of the water sold out within two days.

Belle Delphine is a 19-year-old Londoner. She has gained a lot of popularity on social media by sitting in a bath filled with water in skimpy clothes. She also calls herself Gamer Girl. Selling her old bath water is her latest idea to make money from her followers. Another way she makes money is by selling selfies of herself. Followers can pay up to $2,500 for some of the selfies. Belle said she is constantly trying to "come up with weird ideas" to make money. Her bath water idea has not been popular with everyone on social media. Many people said it was "gross". An Instagram user commented: "Every day, we stray further and further away from God." Other people praised her business skills.